

"The School Certificate in Data Protection"

The Information Law Practice

The SCDP is provided in association with The Information Law Practice, a law firm specialising in data protection and freedom of information in the education sector. Further information go to www.theinformationlawpractice.com

Our main trainer:

Paula Williamson is a leading information law solicitor with particular experience advising schools and academies on the full range of data protection and freedom of information issues such as handling difficult information access requests, drafting data protection policies, advising on the school website, BYOD, cloud computing issues and carrying school data protection audits. With her past background as a prosecutor, Paula is regularly instructed to defend schools facing enforcement action by the Information Commissioner's Office (ICO). Paula sits on the British Computing Society's Data Protection Panel where she sets examinations in this subject. She is also a regular speaker for ISBA.
